President Obama to deliver Las Vegas remarks next door to NPRI; NPRI president available for comment

On Jan. 26, 2012, President Barack Obama is scheduled to deliver a speech at the property of the Nevada Policy Research Institute's ... next-door neighbor.

President Obama has announced he will deliver a public, mid-morning address at UPS Las Vegas South, located on East Arby Lane. The office of the Nevada Policy Research Institute is right next door to the UPS plant, and Andy Matthews, NPRI's president, will be available for comment, both before and after President Obama's speech.

"As NPRI is the leading organization in Nevada that is dedicated to free enterprise, individual liberty and limited, accountable government, it is fortuitous that President Obama is delivering his Las Vegas remarks next door to our office," said Matthews. "While the president may have power and pomp, NPRI has something more important — the solutions needed to get our state and our nation headed in a better direction.

"We're grateful the president has made it so convenient for media members to get the Institute's perspective after his remarks. While the president continues to promote wasteful, job-killing policies and ineffective approaches to meeting our nation's economic and energy challenges, NPRI isn't afraid to point out the failures of the so-called stimulus package or green-energy boondoggles like Solyndra.

"The hard-working people of Nevada know what President Obama, as consistently indicated by his actions and rhetoric, does not: that the solutions to our economic challenges are to be found not in the heavy hand of government, but by unleashing the power of the private sector and our nation's system of free enterprise. We at NPRI look forward to getting that message out, not just this week, but in the weeks, months and years ahead."
